Identifying Adverbs

Adverbs are words that describe or give more information about verbs, adjectives and other adverbs. We use adverbs to enhance ideas or help us describe how, when, where, how much or how often an action was performed.

Adverbs usually (but not always) end in the suffix 'ly'. The ones that end in 'ly' are easy to identify.

Adverbs can come in many different places in a sentence. They often come before or after the verb or adjective they are modifying, but they can also come at the beginning or at the end of a sentence.

Look at examples from the stories this week. The arrows will help you understand what the adverb is modifying.

"Jamaica's bobsleigh team will likely not win a medal but they are getting a lot of attention anyway."

"He says it's something he's dreamed of ever since watching Cool Runnings."

"York University professor Richard Leblanc says salaries in Ontario increased significantly after that province introduced its sunshine list."

Here are some adverbs that do not end in 'ly' (and a few exceptions):

To describe how or how much: almost, alone, badly, bright, even, ever, extremely, hard, late, little, much, not, quite, rather, really, so, still, terribly, too, very, well

To describe when: after, afterwards, already, annually, before, daily, during, finally, just, last, never, next, now, recently, soon, since, still, then, today, tomorrow, weekly, when, yesterday

To describe where: abroad, anywhere, away, everywhere, here, home, in, inside, out, outside, somewhere, there, underground, upstairs

To describe how often: always, every, likely, usually, often, sometimes, occasionally, seldom, rarely, never

Transcripts of Weekly News Stories

	FEBRUARY 7 TH WEEKLY NEWS STORIES	TIME
Introduction	Hi, I'm Rosa Marchitelli and you're listening to Learning English with CBC for February 7 th .	0:00
Story 1	The Winter Olympics have begun in Sochi, Russia. These are the 22 nd winter Olympics. Four years ago the games were held in Vancouver, and Canada won the highest number of gold medals with 14. Jamaica's bobsleigh team will likely not win a medal but they are getting a lot of attention anyway. A movie called Cool Runnings was made about Jamaican bobsledders at the 1988 Calgary Olympics, and that movie has inspired a northern Alberta oilsands company to sponsor the Jamaican bobsleigh team in Sochi. CP Services has signed a four-year deal with the team worth around 35 thousand dollars a year. Vern Janvier is owner of the company. He says it's something he's dreamed of ever since watching Cool Runnings .	0:10
Story 2	The Calgary public school board has posted a video on its website to help parents better understand the new report cards. CBE schools are adjusting to Alberta Education's new programs of study. Instead of letter or number grades in Kindergarten through grade nine, students will be assessed with terms like exemplary, evident and emerging. The CBE says teachers will also give personalized comments for each student. Some schools are already using it - others are working with parents on report cards. The CBE has posted information and a video of a presentation to trustees this week to explain the process.	01:23
Story 3	There are different opinions on Alberta's first ever 'sunshine list'. A list of all provincial employees making 100 thousand dollars and more is now available on the internet. But a professor who studied a similar list in Ontario, says it may raise salaries. York University professor Richard Leblanc says salaries in Ontario increased significantly after that province introduced its sunshine list, because employees used the information to ask for more pay. Derek Fildebrandt, with the Canadian Taxpayers Federation, agrees salaries have jumped in Ontario, but says it was not only caused by the sunshine list. In Alberta, the government isn't saying salaries will level off or come down.	02:17
